

They're Back

In a reminder of one of the defining episodes in the early history of Russia, six replicas of Viking longboats carrying more than 100 descendants of the Varangians — whom, according to legend, the Russians invited to rule them in the ninth century — arrived in St. Petersburg this week.